Research in Management Learning & Education
The New School - New York City, USA 2017

5th Annual Research in Management Learning and Education (RMLE) Unconference at The New School in New York, NY, USA
June 28-29, 2017

CALL FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Research discussions shouldn't have to rise from the ashes of recycled rhetoric and boring presentations prepared months in advance. Interactions about research should be fresh, organic, and engaging. If you're interested in being a generator of innovative, cutting-edge research in management education or if you have questions related to research in management education that are not addressed through traditional conference or workshop forums, our fifth annual Research in Management Learning and Education (RMLE) Unconference is for you.

FORMAT & OBJECTIVES

Unlike traditional conference formats with strict agendas, predetermined content, fixed streams, and planned presentations, an unconference is organic and participant-driven. The fundamental goal of an unconference is to bring together interested, passionate, and knowledgeable people to create a forum where they share, learn, engage, question, contribute, discuss, and debate issues they deem important. Each participant is a contributor and all interactions take place in flexible and highly interactive ways (see <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Unconference> for more on this format).

The 2017 RMLE Unconference will start at 12:00pm on Wednesday, June 28th and conclude at 4:00pm on Thursday, June 29th. During this 1.5 day event, you will have the opportunity to:

- Share ideas about key research areas that you would like to pursue with others.
- Discuss research questions or concerns that you have been unable to address in other forums.
- Learn from others about their experiences with research project design, development, and publication.
- Consider issues that are emerging through recent management education research and scholarship.
- Meet and network in an intimate and informal setting with other faculty members interested in management education research.
- Interact with editors and board members of numerous journals including the Academy of Management Learning and Education, the Journal of Management Education, Management Learning, Decision Sciences Journal of Innovative Education, and Management Teaching Review.

SUBMISSIONS

In terms of scope, the research domain for RMLE Unconferences is anything that relates to management teaching, learning, education, and the contexts within which these occur. As a result, your submission should focus on issues related to all applications of management education (whether that be in universities, consulting agencies, or other organizations) as well as the processes and outcomes related to its practice.

The path to attending the RMLE Unconference is straightforward. First, think about management education research questions, ideas, and concerns (QICs) that are important to you. Then, using those thoughts as fodder, create a short summary of your most pressing QICs and send it in for review. These submissions are not traditional conference submissions in that they should be free-flowing descriptions of your questions, ideas, and concerns. You do not need to include references unless they help you explain your thoughts. In terms of format, QIC submissions should be sent as single-spaced Word documents written in Times New Roman (11pt) font. Please include two versions of your submission: (1) the first with a title, your name, institutional affiliation, and email address and (2) the second with a title only (to be used for blind review).

In terms of length, submissions can be as short as you feel comfortable with in terms of adequately sharing your questions, ideas, and concerns but should be no longer than 500 words excluding references, if you have them. Please note: the only way to attend the event is if you have an accepted QIC submission.

Examples of a few of the QIC topics drawn from our past RMLE Unconferences include the application of threshold concepts on management research and practice; questions about managerial wisdom and embeddedness; concerns related to the impact of technology, culture, and disruption on learning; facilitating and measuring deep-level learning, reflexivity, and engagement; the interface of culture and learning; and questions about how institutionalization and accreditation pressures are impacting tertiary education. Ideas for sharing can stem from current or future research projects, practical or conceptual extensions to theories or models that excite or interest you, or discussions you have had with colleagues in your own or other disciplines. Other ideas may stem from calls for special issues, recent articles you have read, global or local issues that impact educational processes, internal mandates within your organization, or anything unusual that has sparked an idea for a research project in your mind. There are countless sources from which exceptional questions, ideas, and concerns can be derived. We look forward to a collection of stimulating and engaging submissions from researchers interested in management education drawn from across a variety of disciplinary backgrounds and all levels of academic tenure/seniority. Early career researchers and those new to management education research are welcome!

The submission deadline for the 2017 RMLE Unconference is Monday, January 30, 2017. Submissions will be double-blind peer reviewed and decisions will be emailed to authors within two weeks of the deadline. All submissions should be emailed to Amy Kenworthy, RMLE Unconference Chair, at akenwort@bond.edu.au Please note: if you do not receive a confirmation receipt within 48 hours of your submission, then it has not been received on our end.

LOCATION & REGISTRATION

We are thrilled to be holding our 2017 RMLE Unconference at The New School (www.newschool.edu) in New York City, USA. The New School is a perfect institutional representation of what we are trying to do with our Unconferences – breaking the mold of tradition and moving ourselves into an organic, free-flowing, creative space in which to radically upend the status quo, extend our thinking, explore new ideas, and create new knowledge together. Additionally, given the unique capacities and institutional knowledge of our host institution partner, having the Parsons School of Design as one of the colleges in The New School, we warmly encourage submissions aimed at challenging assumptions and generating knowledge in the areas of design, media, and participatory management.

The 2017 RMLE Unconference will have a recommended registration fee of $165.00 USD. Every contributor with an accepted submission will be asked to pay this fee to help offset the costs of the event for our host partner institution. In the spirit of untraditional aspects of the Unconference, we have a no fee option for people who would like to attend who are doctoral students or junior faculty and may not have the institutional or personal funds to offset the costs of attending. Please note the inclusion of a registration fee is designed to offset only some, not all, of the costs of the event. With two working lunches, a working dinner, and refreshments included, we're trying our best to make this a genuinely affordable, yet inviting, engaging, and productive event for everyone.

Registration for the Unconference must be completed on or before Monday, April 24, 2017. Further registration information will be emailed to all accepted contributors as a part of their acceptance email.

For more information about our RMLE Unconferences, please see our website at www.rmle.org .
Come be a part of it with us... we can't wait to see what the 2017 event brings!
